WHISKEY

SUES FOR $500,000 HEART BALM FROM MILLIONAIRE OF 80

Former Hotel Cashier of 38 Declares Millionaire Farmer Recluse Jilted Her.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 11.-Twelve sider to-day whether the heart of a woman aged thirty-five can be wounded $500,000 worth, because a man nearly eighty years old didn't keep his promise to marry her.

The plaintiff is Miss Nettle Richard

The defendant, Henry Denniston who is a semi-recluse on his farm at Swissvale, just outside of this city. is said to be worth $2,000,000. He says he never intended to marry Miss Richardson, who formerly was cashier in a hotel here. He declares he intends to live unmarried the rest of his life and to leave his fortune for the establishing of a home for orphans and afflicted children.

Miss Richardson makes affidavit that more than a year ago she met the old millionaire at the home of one of his relatives, that he fell in love with her and proposed marriage; that she returned his affection and promised to marry him.

Then, according to her amdavita, Denniston's kinsfolk, hearing of the engagement, tried to block the marriage by having him taken before the court on the charge that he was incompetent to manage his affairs, and by endeavoring to have a guardian appointed for him.

It is true that Denniston's santy was looked into, but in court he sur-prised every one with his vigorous age his fortune.

Just before this examination, however, Mr. Denniston had his rather ramshackle house fitted up juxuriously. He did so, Miss Richardson declares, in order that his bride might have a proper home. She will introduce testimony as to the reflitting of the place as indicating his intention to marry.

to marry.

His relatives, the plaintiff swears, found other means of dissuading him from the idea of marriage, and so be feclined to carry out his compact with
